the theatrical firm of Klaw & Erlanger for the last twenty-eight years, died suddenly at 12.30 o'clock this morning in his home at No. 251 West Eighty-ninth Street. Despite his sixty years he had been apparently in perfect health and had played golf yesterday afternoon with Mr. Erlanger, to whom he was related.

Death was caused by heart trouble, In the theatrical world Mr. Livingston was widely known and universally liked. He had handled millions of dollars for his employers with such scrupulous care that no one else in the firm ever looked at his books. He was a member of the Friars Club and other organizations connected with the theatrical business.

Born in St. Claire, Mich.; in 1856, Mr. Livingston made his first venture their food, eventually find themselves in a condition that evolves into a problem of huge proportions the eating of a simple meal; and it is common to meet up with many who, though aware that lack of proper bodily nourishment is dangerous to a degree, nevertheless do nothing to improve their condition.

A suggestion of inestimable value is the taking of Johann Hoff's Malt Extract with meals. This delightfully palatable body builder possesses unusual digestive properties that have been commented upon by, and carry the endorsement of, high medical authorities. Can be procured from any reliable druggist and nothing but the genuine Johann Hoff's should be accepted.—Advt.

Born in St. Claire, Mich.; in 1856, Mr. Livingston made his first venture in Cleveland, when he went into the shoe busine.. there. When the firm of Klaw & Erlanger was formed he was induced to become its auditor, a post he has held ever since. His widow, who was Miss Gussie Bennett, and two brothers—Mitchell and Morris, of Cleveland,—survive him.

The funeral will be held Sunday morning. Private services will take place at the home, followed by a public service, conducted by Dr. Schulman, at Temple Beth-El. Interment will be at Cleveland, the family home.

Vessel Unlighted, Report Crew o Richmond, Which Is Badly

The municipal ferryboat Richmond on the way to Staten Island collided with an unidentified freight steamer off Bedloe's Island early this morning. There were nearly one hundred and fifty passengers on the Richmond, and the collision caused much excitement.

It was hazy on the bay, and, according to members of the crew the freight steamer had no lights. The ferryboat hit the craft on the port bow and grazed along the side of the vessel until she got

The Richmond proceeded to St. George where she discharged her passengers and tied up. Her bow is badly damaged above the water line and she probably will be out of commission some time.
